Nourishing Minds through Nature

Travelling Dementia Suitcase

This programme is right for if you have a dementia, or you are a personal or professional carer for someone with a dementia.

It is also right for you if you work in elderly or social care, counselling, therapy, or nursing and want to enhance quality of life for your clients.

could be a hospital, care home or a local group. It could be just for your own family member.

You will learn about each of the senses and how dementia impacts on sensory perception. You will explore the why and how nature improves quality of life.

By becoming a volunteer with the Travelling Dementia Suitcase project, you will:

- Make a difference in the life of someone with a dementia
- Access free training on nature therapy and dementia care
- Gain valuable experience of delivery in a supportive environment
- Have fun and make new friends
- Enhance your CV

This is a unique programme that helps people with a dementia combat the distressing effects of sensory deprivation that occurs as dementia progresses.

Through involvement in gentle and fun nature activities, communication with someone with a dementia lasts long after language and memory become fragile.

The project is available in Portsmouth, Southampton and the Isle of Wight. You can be involved in different ways:
